ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This report was made possible through the efforts put forth by Alcohol and Drug Programs counsellors, National Native Alcohol and Drug Abuse Program counsellors and the Native Courtworkers in B.C. These individuals took precious time to respond to two surveys sent out to them concerning the delivery of substance abuse treatment, prevention and education services to the Native people of B.C.

The high number of responses obtained in both surveys and the thorough coverage of the issues was a clear demonstration of the interest these individuals had in improving services to Native people.

The assistance provided by ADP Regional Managers and Program Directors, NNADAP Project Coordinators and Native Courtworker Supervisors in distributing the surveys to counsellors in their regions/programs was an important contribution to this study.

The participation of NNADAP workers and Tillicum House trainees in the pretesting of the surveys was also greatly appreciated.

Thanks to Linda Cleland for her efforts and perseverance in the typing of this report.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This study was conducted in two phases. Phase I consisted of an "open-ended" questionnaire seeking information on the problems which hinder the delivery of alcohol and drug abuse treatment, prevention and education services to the Native population of British Columbia.

The responses from Phase I were summarized and used to develop a "closed ended" questionnaire (Phase II). The intent of Phase II was to provide a profile of the degree to which the service delivery problems cited in Phase I exist:

- a) across specific alcohol and drug programs (Alcohol and Drug Programs, National Native Alcohol and Drug Abuse Program and Native Courtworkers Program)
- b) across and within ADP regions
- c) across and within NNADAP zones
- d) across and within zones of the Native Courtworkers Program

In Phase I and II 260 questionnaires were distributed to Alcohol and Drug Program counsellors, National Native Alcohol and Drug Abuse Program counsellors and Native Courtworkers. The response rate obtained for Phase I was 51% and for Phase II 61%.

The highlights of the main conclusions drawn in this study are:

Alcohol abuse is considered a common problem in 93% of Native communities in B.C.

Drug abuse (not including alcohol) is considered a common problem in 81% of Native communities in B.C.

There is a great demand for additional substance abuse treatment services for Natives.

In order of priority 1) Native youth 2) Native men 3) Native women are seen as needing additional substance abuse treatment services.

The office hours of most substance abuse treatment programs are not flexible enough to meet the needs of Native people.

The treatment needs of Native people are seen as being very different from those of non-Natives.

Participation in cultural aspects of Native substance abuse treatment programs, such as sweat lodges or sweet grass ceremonies, should be optional to Native clients.

Native substance abuse treatment programs should be designed and staffed by both Native and non-Native people.

Native people would get the most benefit from substance abuse treatment if it was provided in their own communities.

Community development programs are the best way to reduce substance abuse related problems within Native communities.

There is not much support within Native communities for preventive services to Natives.

Natives who are put on waiting lists for substance abuse treatment do not usually have adequate contact/support from either treatment or community resources during their waiting period.

There are not adequate resources to provide a support system for Native clients after they have completed treatment.

Day care services are not usually available for Native women who are receiving substance abuse treatment.

It is difficult for Native clients to open up and discuss their problems with Native counsellors who they have known for a long time.

Native counsellors have too broad a role (e.g. to be all things to all people).

More substance abuse education specific to Natives is needed for school-aged Native youth.

There are not enough recreational programs for Native youth in B.C.

The prevention videotapes on substance abuse are more appropriate for non-Natives than for Natives.

The prevention pamphlets, posters etc. on substance abuse are more appropriate for non-Natives than for Natives.

The prevention videotapes on Fetal Alcohol Syndrome are more appropriate for non-Natives than for Natives.

The prevention pamphlets, posters etc. on Fetal Alcohol Syndrome are more appropriate for non-Natives than for Natives.

Substance abuse programs do not receive enough funding to adequately provide substance abuse services to Natives especially in the areas of preventive services, outreach services and travel.

There is a lack of information sharing between NNADAP and ADP on how to more effectively provide substance abuse services to Natives.

The referral system between NNADAP and ADP services is not well coordinated.

Federal and Provincial substance abuse services for Natives should be coordinated.

Most Native band councils do not actively try to control or reduce the amount of drug abuse (not including alcohol) within their communities.

Native leaders often avoid taking responsibility for the problem of substance abuse in their communities.

Most Native band councils are not well educated concerning substance abuse and its effect on people.

Needs Concerning the Delivery of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Treatment, Prevention and Education Services to the Native Peoples of British Columbia

The intent of this study was to:

1. acquire information from "expert" sources on problems which hinder the delivery of alcohol and drug abuse treatment, prevention and education services to the Native population of B.C.
2. provide recommendations concerning ways in which the service delivery problems could be minimized.
3. provide a profile of the degree to which specific service delivery problems exist:
 - a) across all programs included in this study (Alcohol and Drug Programs, National Native Alcohol and Drug Abuse Program and the Native Courtworkers Program).
 - b) across and within ADP regions.
 - c) across and within NNADAP zones.
 - d) across and within zones of the Native Courtworkers Program.

This study was prompted on the basis of the conclusions drawn in three recent assessments of alcohol and drug abuse treatment and prevention programs for B.C. Natives. The main conclusions drawn in each of these assessments point to the profound impact that alcohol and drug abuse has on the lives of Native people across B.C. and the need to determine more effective ways of dealing with this problem.

The extent of substance abuse among Native people was documented in a 1983 needs assessment conducted by the Nuuchahnulth Tribal Council (with Adams, Egan and Shearer Planning Consultants) on behalf of the National Native Alcohol and Drug Abuse Program. The following is one of the main conclusions reached in this report:

The evidence supports the common statement that alcohol and drug abuse affects 100% of Native people in B.C. Abusers make up anywhere from 5% to 95% of the adult population of individual Native communities, with 40% to 80% being the range of a majority of estimates. All Native people are profoundly affected by abuse amongst members of their families, their friends and their neighbors.¹

It was further revealed in this report that far more effort must be put forth by all those concerned (especially the Federal and Provincial Government) in order to combat substance abuse.

One way of reducing substance abuse as suggested in the Nuu-chah-nulth Tribal Council report was to promote healthy relationships between Native communities and mixed and non-Native communities. This was to be partially achieved by setting up a "Liaison between predominantly non-Native and predominantly Native agencies."² (Nuu-chah-nulth Tribal Council and Adams, Egan and Shearer Planning Consultants, 1983) Support of this recommendation was demonstrated in this study by collecting information concerning Native substance abuse from predominantly non-Native agencies (Alcohol and Drug Programs) and predominantly Native agencies (National Native Alcohol and Drug Abuse Program and Native Courtworkers Program).

The second needs assessment influencing the initiation of this study was the Urban Research Project (conducted by the National Association of Friendship Centres, 1985). This report describes the inadequacy of substance abuse services in meeting the needs of urban Natives. The following are highlights of the conclusions reached in this report:

The demographic information collected from 84 urban Native Friendship Centre communities differs greatly from data collected and compiled by Statistics Canada. This raises the issue that previous data as collected and utilized by Government is inaccurate.

Existing services, programs and activities (relating to Substance Abuse (sic)) within Friendship Centres are not adequate to significantly impact on Native persons with Substance Abuse problems. The majority of Centres do not receive specific resources for Alcohol and Drug (sic) programming, however they continue to receive requests, and are constantly attempting to meet the needs.

The services of other social agencies as they relate to Native persons with Substance Abuse problems are not viewed as being adequate, generally due to a lack of Native awareness and sensitivity, as well as a lack of adequate resources (financial, human and physical) resulting in a severe lack of relevant and appropriate community approaches to preventing and combatting Substance Abuse among Native people.

Substance Abuse is prevalent among Native people in urban communities. Friendship Centres describe severe levels of abuse among all age and target groups with Alcohol (sic) being the primary substance. The evidence, as collected from 56 responding Centres, is more than sufficient to conclude that relevant and appropriate mechanisms must be implemented for urban Native people and their institutions in order to adequately prevent, combat and treat Substance Abuse.

Native persons in urban communities continue to face profound barriers and obstacles, such as high rates of unemployment, a lack of housing, poor education and low levels of self-esteem and confidence which contribute to high levels of Alcohol and Drug Abuse (sic).

As evidenced by Native courtwork program statistics, there are high numbers and percentages of Native people in conflict with the law. Friendship Centres, through their Courtworkers report that many of these clients have alcohol problems, and that charges are alcohol-related. This further justifies the need for prevention and appropriate/relevant community approaches to combatting and treating Substance Abuse among Native persons.

There are no Native-specific mandates, policies or programs relating to Alcohol and Drug Abuse in any Province/Territory. This has resulted in an obvious lack of effective programs, services or activities directed to the urban Native population.

There are no specific Federal programs directed to urban Native persons with Substance Abuse problems. The current National Native Alcohol and Drug Abuse program (sic) has as it's mandate or priority the servicing of on-Reserve Status or Treaty Indian and Inuit people only.³

In 1986 the Program Development and Prevention Unit of Alcohol and Drug Programs conducted a review (Issues and Principles to Guide the Development of a Policy for Helping Native People in B.C. Combat Substance Abuse) of substance abuse services for B.C. Natives. Based on the following conclusions, the need to develop a provincial policy for helping Native people combat substance abuse arose:

Alcohol abuse is considered a very serious problem among Native people in British Columbia, impacting in one way or another upon 100% of that population.

The services provided, and programs funded, by Alcohol and Drug Programs are considered overall to be not responding to the needs of Native people.

Pressure is growing from both within and outside Alcohol and Drug Programs' system to respond more effectively.

Although better serving Native people will involve added expense in the long run, there are many possible improvements which involve relatively little dollar cost. An inexpensive first step is to develop an agreed-upon policy to guide the work of the diverse set of individuals and programs involved in service delivery.⁴

The key issues to be addressed in policy development that were identified as a result of the above review are presented below.

- Do we see services to Native people as an area needing special attention?
- Generic versus specialized services and staffing.
- Who's doing what? (roles of various levels of government)
- The need to improve the sensitivity and capability of the entire service network to respond effectively.
- The need to build a knowledge base about what works in helping Native individuals, families and communities to combat abuse.
- Monitoring program utilization.
- Building positive working relationships for on-going problem-solving.
- Co-ordination with other B.C. government programs.
- What will be the roles of various staff members in development and implementation of policy regarding services for Natives?
- Who will pay?⁵

The focus of this study was on "The need to build a knowledge base about what works for Native individuals, families and communities to combat abuse."⁶ It is the opinion of this writer and the Alcohol and Drug Programs' Consultant, Natives that this research should be conducted in a manner which is sensitive to the concerns and preferences of Native people. It should reflect the opinions and experiences of those who have first hand knowledge of where gaps exist in services for Natives with substance abuse problems.

The cooperation and support of the entire service network in determining the needs of Native people is vital. The exchange of information across all jurisdictions and agencies within B.C., whether they be Provincial, Federal or local (band or tribal council) will help increase the capability and sensitivity of services.

It is hoped that this study will be an example of how the responsibility for providing the best possible quality of service to Native people can be shared.

PROCEDURE

- 1) In August of 1987 an "open-ended" questionnaire (see Appendix B) was distributed to NNADAP and ADP counsellors and Native Courtworkers. The questionnaire (Phase I) asked for information on:

- A) Problems which hinder the delivery of alcohol and drug treatment, prevention and education services to the Native people of British Columbia.
- B) Recommendations concerning ways in which service delivery problems could be minimized.

Some examples of the responses obtained in this questionnaire can be found in "Appendix A" of this report.

- 2) The responses from the questionnaire were summarized and translated into statements about the problems that exist in the delivery of alcohol and drug treatment, prevention and education services to B.C.'s Native people.
- 3) These statements were used to design a second questionnaire (Phase II) where respondents (NNADAP and ADP counsellors and Native Courtworkers) were asked to indicate their level of agreement or disagreement with the statements as they apply to their "service delivery area." A copy of the second questionnaire is provided in "Appendix C" of this report. An explanation of "service delivery area" is given on page 3 of the questionnaire.

Extensive pre-testing of Phase I and II questionnaires took place prior to their distribution.

- 4) The results from questionnaire II were summarized and have been presented in four sections:

RESULTS SECTION I lists the "Main Conclusions" drawn from the overall responses received in questionnaire II.

RESULTS SECTION II consists of four tables describing questionnaire II response rates.

In RESULTS SECTION III questionnaire statements are categorized under specific headings. Beneath each statement, the overall percentage of "agree", "disagree", "not sure", "missing/invalid", and, where applicable, "haven't seen", responses are indicated.

RESULTS SECTION IV consists of tables representing the response to each statement in questionnaire II (in terms of number and percentage of responses):

- a) across all programs (ADP, NNADAP and Native Courtworkers).
 - b) across and within ADP regions.
 - c) across and within NNADAP zones.
 - d) across and within zones of the Native Courtworkers Program.
- 5) The final section of the report discusses recommendations concerning ways in which the service delivery problems could be minimized.

RESULTS SECTION I

Main Conclusions

Alcohol abuse is a common problem in 93% of Native communities in B.C.

Drug abuse (not including alcohol) is a common problem in 81% of Native communities in B.C.

Abuse of alcohol and other drugs is a problem among Native and non-Native* counsellors.

In order of priority 1) Native youth 2) Native men 3) Native women are seen by substance abuse counsellors as needing treatment services.

There is a great demand for additional substance abuse treatment programs for Natives.

The office hours of most substance abuse treatment programs are not flexible enough to meet the needs of Native people.

Most substance abuse treatment programs give potential Native clients a full orientation to their treatment program.

In general, stereotypes (e.g. drunken Indian) do not interfere with Native people receiving a thorough assessment of their substance abuse problems.

Substance abuse treatment programs usually focus enough on life problems associated with substance abuse (e.g. marital, family, work).

Most substance abuse treatment programs are appropriate for Natives.

The treatment needs of Native people are seen by substance abuse counsellors as being very different from those of non-Natives.

Participation in cultural aspects of Native substance abuse treatment programs, such as sweat lodges or sweet grass ceremonies, should be optional to Native clients.

Encouragement alone will not help Native people with substance abuse problems to improve.

Dependence on alcohol is not best described as a learned behaviour.

* Non-Natives - members of the predominantly "White" society

In order of preference (#1 being the most desired), Native substance abuse treatment programs should be:

- 1 designed and staffed by Native and non-Native people.
2. designed and staffed by Natives only.
3. designed by Natives and staffed by both Natives and non-Natives.
4. designed by non-Natives and staffed by both Natives and non-Natives.
5. designed by non-Natives and staffed by Natives.

Native people would get the most benefit from substance abuse treatment if it was provided in their own communities.

Community development programs are the best way to reduce substance abuse related problems within Native communities.

There is not much community support for preventive services for Natives.

Natives who are put on waiting lists for substance abuse treatment do not usually have adequate contact/support from either treatment or community resources during their waiting period.

There are not adequate resources to provide a support system for Native clients after they have completed treatment.

Day care services are not usually available to Native women who are receiving substance abuse treatment.

It is not usually difficult for Native counsellors to be nonjudgemental with clients from their own community.

It is difficult for Native clients to open up and discuss their problems with Native counsellors who they have known for a long time.

In general, Native clients feel they can trust non-Native substance abuse counsellors.

Non-Native substance abuse counsellors generally do not "patronize" Natives who are seeking help for their substance abuse problems.

Non-Native substance abuse counsellors are most often sensitive to the special treatment needs of Native clients.

Native substance abuse counsellors have too broad a role (e.g. to be all things to all people).

Most of the substance abuse education that Natives receive focuses enough on life problems associated with substance abuse (e.g. marital, family, work).

More substance abuse education specific to Natives is needed for school aged Native youth in B.C.

There are not enough recreational programs for Native youth in B.C.

The prevention videotapes on substance abuse are more appropriate for non-Natives than for Natives.

The prevention pamphlets, posters etc. on substance abuse are more appropriate for non-Natives than Natives.

The prevention videotapes on Fetal Alcohol Syndrome are more appropriate for non-Natives than Natives.

The prevention pamphlets, posters on Fetal Alcohol Syndrome are more appropriate for non-Natives than Natives.

Substance abuse programs do not receive enough funding to adequately provide substance abuse services to Natives especially in the areas of preventive services, outreach services and travel.

There is a lack of information sharing between NNADAP and ADP on how to more effectively provide substance abuse services to Natives.

The referral system between NNADAP and ADP services is not well coordinated.

Federal and Provincial substance abuse services for Natives should be coordinated.

Most substance abuse counsellors throughout B.C. know what ADP resources are available to them.

Most substance abuse counsellors throughout B.C. know what NNADAP resources are available to them.

Most Native band councils actively try to control or reduce the amount of alcohol abuse within their communities.

Most Native band councils do not actively try to control or reduce the amount of drug abuse (not including alcohol) within their communities.

Native leaders often avoid taking responsibility for the problem of substance abuse within their communities.

Most Native band council members are not well educated concerning substance abuse and its effects on people.

The goals and objectives of most substance abuse programs are well defined.

Within most substance abuse programs there is a lot of high energy and good staff morale.

In most cases substance abuse programs have a very positive relationship with regional/zonal management.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Further steps should be taken to ensure the sobriety of both Native and non-Native substance abuse counsellors.

Native youth should be a priority in the delivery of substance abuse treatment services to Native people.

Additional substance abuse treatment services should be provided in order to reduce/prevent substance abuse among Native people.

The office hours of substance abuse treatment services should be more flexible e.g. geared towards more of a "drop-in" basis.

Substance abuse treatment personnel should be educated regarding the unique treatment needs of Native people.

Participation in cultural aspects of Native substance abuse treatment programs, such as sweat lodges or sweet grass ceremonies should be optional to Native clients.

Substance abuse treatment services for Native people should be designed and staffed by both Native and non-Native people.

Substance abuse treatment services for Native people should be provided in their own community.

More community development programs should be implemented in order to reduce/prevent substance abuse within Native communities.

Additional resources should be provided in order to ensure adequate contact/support for Native people who are put on a waiting list for substance abuse treatment e.g. contact with counsellors, support groups.

Additional resources should be provided in order for Native clients to have an adequate post-treatment support system e.g. "Follow-up support, including assistance in re-adjusting to community life and family life, finding shelter, jobs, training, support of peers through AA groups, etc."⁷

Additional day care services for Native women who are receiving substance abuse treatment should be made available.

Native clients should not be placed with Native substance abuse counsellors who they have known for a long time.

The burden that is placed upon Native substance abuse counsellors (e.g. to be all things to all people) should be reduced.

School aged Native youth should receive substance abuse education which is specific to Native people.

Vocational training programs should be made available for Native youth.

Additional recreational programs should be created for Native youth.

Substance abuse prevention videotapes which are appropriate for Native people should be developed.

Substance abuse prevention pamphlets, posters etc. which are appropriate for Native people should be developed.

Fetal Alcohol Syndrome prevention videotapes that are appropriate for Native people should be developed.

Fetal Alcohol Syndrome prevention pamphlets, posters etc. that are appropriate for Native people should be developed.

Additional funding should be provided to improve substance abuse prevention services.

Additional funding should be provided to improve outreach services to Native people.

Additional funding should be provided to allow substance abuse counsellors to travel to outlying areas.

An information sharing system between NNADAP and ADP, on how to provide more effective substance abuse services to Native people, should be established.

A better coordinated referral system between NNADAP and ADP should be established.

The services of Provincial and Federal substance abuse services should be better coordinated.

Native band councils should become more involved in the control/reduction of drug abuse within their communities.

APPENDIX A

Phase I Questionnaire Response Examples

The following section contains examples of the types of responses obtained in the "open ended" questionnaire where ADP and NNADAP counsellors and Native Courtworkers were asked to describe:

What factors if any impede or limit the delivery of alcohol and drug treatment, prevention and education services to the Native population of British Columbia?

It was from responses such as the ones below that the statements in Phase II questionnaire were derived.

The basic problem is a treatment mentality which is based only on the provision of "alcohol and drug counselling services" in response to a problem which goes much deeper into the fabric of people's lives than simply a recognition of the need to quit drinking. There are many problems which must be addressed at the same time as the alcohol and drug counselling is done. The goal must be the habilitation (sic) of the whole person. Some of these areas of concern are (not in any particular order):

- a) educational upgrading
- b) job preparation and experience
- c) emotional support and coping skills
- d) child care and rearing skills
- e) spiritual and cultural investigation and growth
- f) "public health" education - nutrition, fitness, disease prevention, family planning and basic health practices
- g) financial realities
- h) life skills - how to live effectively in the greater society eg. legal realities, the welfare and medical systems, learning how to help yourself
- i) education of the children - ie: how to fit in
- j) prevention and early intervention with youths especially in the initial stages of such a program when a healthy family and community environment may not yet have been accomplished

Denial of a problem with chemicals in the communities.

Traditional value of keeping family problems within the family (secrets).

Lack of turnout at information giving workshops.

Attitude towards addiction. Elders and others feel it is a case of willpower. The disease concept is mostly rejected.

Attitudes towards being "Native" and "alcoholic", living up to the label, "Drunken Indian".

Lack of support systems. No A.A. involvement.

Negative attitude towards these groups but no motivation to start their own.

Self-prejudice, low self-esteem, all community members stuck in the grieving process, creating jealousy, gossip, anger, blaming, etc.

Politics appears to be constantly brought into a health issue keeping old resentments burning. Until people move past these recovery is minimal.

probably best to work within the community since the power of the family is so strong.

It's a problem when enough care is not taken in assessing a client ready for residential treatment. Ill prepared clients usually end up leaving treatment early on or are asked to leave because adequate assessment and information have not been supplied at the front end. This has a negative ripple effect on the community, watching that individual may add to their guilt and shame.

lack of resources on reserve, eg. well trained alcohol and drug counsellors and community development people.

lack of culture specific educational material.

lack of trained Native social workers.

no coordinated provincial-federal strategy.

Many of our role models and leaders don't realize that the people look for their leadership in social behaviour.

There is always a substantial waiting list to enter any of the treatment centres. Those who must wait usually get sidetracked, change their minds or succumb to peer pressure and start drinking, even though they were prepared to voluntarily attend treatment.

Lack of direction and active support from band councils.

There are no obvious individuals or support group indicating even stand-by support for prevention per se or any other activity.

I believe there needs to be a strong emphasis on alcohol education especially within the locally controlled school program.

small dispersed populations are difficult to service. Urban populations are generally alienated from provincial service delivery system.

lack of resources means workers have to work on prevention, education, group counselling, individual counselling, legal liaison, referrals, follow-up and building support groups.

family programs such as parenting skills, nutrition, education, infant stimulation need to be offered in parallel with ADP programs to keep the next generation from getting stuck in the same cycle.

Not enough money for travel, it limits our ability to deliver drug and alcohol outpatient treatment, prevention and education services.

The prescription drugs are one of the worst problems that we have to face and treat and try to educate clients.

It's hard to run a program when you are under the authority of those that are practicing alcoholics, with no understanding of wellness.

Counsellors in communities seem to have a lot of knowledge and theory with no skills to implement a community strategy, as I have yet to see a community plan of wellness with the exception of Alkali Lake or Chilliwack.

There is no consistency or counsellor standards for hiring in Native communities.

Counsellors need to have training in many areas such as alcoholism, suicide, family, youth.

Chief and Council - should have more in-put in deciding how social funding is distributed to communities, especially their own bands. Up to now - only bureaucrats solely have the say in deciding how funding should be spent, and distributed.

Support and understanding to the people that do counselling on reserve.

Here on the reserve the chief and council have no idea of the inner details of the counsellor's work.

We deal with rape, incest, physical abuse, etc. There is so much to deal with and so very little understanding of the problems by other workers.

This survey is conducted under the direction of the Program Consultant, Natives, Program Development and Prevention Division, Alcohol and Drug Programs. It has been brought to the attention of Doug Wilson, Program Consultant, Natives that the alcohol and drug treatment services to Native people need to be improved. We feel that our understanding of this important issue will be greatly increased through your responses to the following questionnaire.

The survey will be conducted in two phases. Phase I, which you are participating in now, is designed to obtain responses from counsellors on the issues as described in this survey form. After the responses from Phase I have been received from across the province, they will be summarized and listed in a brief and concise format.

This list of issues and proposed solutions will be returned to you. Phase II of the survey will involve you in a review of the list to ensure that all of the issues/solutions have been identified. At that time you will also be asked to rank the issues from most to least important and rank the solutions from most to least desirable. Phase II will also collect some basic information concerning your region, type of service and the position you hold.

Your contribution to this survey is greatly appreciated.

Alcohol and Drug Program Counsellors should return the questionnaire to us via their Program Director. If you have any questions please contact Laura Hummelle or Doug Wilson at 387-4772. We thank you in advance for your cooperation.

1. Please indicate the source of funding for your program.
(check all that apply)

_____ Federal Government _____ Provincial Government
_____ Other (please specify)

2. How many years have you been counselling Native Indians? _____
3. (a) What proportion of your clients are Native Indians? _____
- (b) How many clients does the proportion, above, represent? _____

4. What factor(s) if any impede or limit the delivery of alcohol and drug treatment, prevention and education services to the Native population of British Columbia?
(Please be as specific as possible).

This image shows a single sheet of white paper with horizontal blue or grey ruling lines. The lines are evenly spaced and run across the width of the page. There is no handwriting or other markings on the paper.

5. What needs to be done in order to improve alcohol and drug treatment, prevention and education service delivery to the Native population in British Columbia?

Dear Respondent:

During the month of August/87 an open-ended questionnaire was mailed under the direction of Doug Wilson, Program Consultant, Natives, to NNADAP and ADP counsellors and Native Courtworkers. The intent of the survey was to acquire information from "expert" sources on two issues:

- (1) problems which hinder the delivery of alcohol and drug treatment, prevention and education services to the Native population of B.C. and
- (2) Recommendations concerning ways in which the service delivery problems could be minimized.

The acquisition of the open-ended responses during August/87 was the first phase of our two phase survey. The Phase I response rate obtained for issue (1) above was 51%. Those responses have been translated into statements that a person can agree or disagree with. The intent of this second and final phase of the survey is to provide a profile of the degree to which these problems exist in geographical areas within the Province of B.C.

Your participation in this survey is completely voluntary and all responses are confidential. Please return the completed survey within ten days of receipt to:

STATEMENT RATING INSTRUCTIONS

On the following pages are a series of statements. Many of them contain a phrase that might be unfamiliar to you. This phrase is defined below. Please think of this definition when considering your responses.

Service Delivery Area

For this survey, a service delivery area refers to

- (1) the geographical area that your program is expected to provide service for. This definition is particularly relevant to outpatient and courtworker services.
- (2) for residential or other programs that serve clients from across the province, a service delivery area refers to your ADP Region or NNADAP Zone.

How do I record my responses to the statements?

- At the top of each page is a rating scale numbered from 1 (Strongly Disagree) to 7 (Strongly Agree). The numbers that are associated with the extent of disagreement/agreement are listed beside each survey statement.
- Read a statement carefully and then refer to the scale at the top of the page. Decide on the number which indicates the response option that comes closest to describing your response.
- Circle that number in the list beside the statement that you are responding to.

For example

- If you "Strongly Disagree" with a survey statement, you should circle the number 1 in the list of numbers that are beside the statement you strongly disagree with.

- Please turn the page -
